WAR'S END HANGS ON AMMUNITION. SAYS VON KLUCK

WHY HIS DRIVE FAILED.

Hints It Was Because Russian Offensive Called Off Troops

Near Paris.

By Carl W. Ackerman.

BERLIN, Oct. 27 (United Press corespondence).-Another German offensive on the western front, toward Paris, is not out of the question.

A year ago Gen. von Kluck's army was threatening the French capital. To-day this army is still the nearest to Paris, but the German offensive centres in the Balkans. Later it may be at the Suez Canal or in Egypt. By spring, perhaps, it will have returned to the well-ploughed battle line in France and Belgium.

I talked with Gen. von Kluck to-day concerning the whole war situation. He was at his Wilmersdorf villa. His Dr. Philip Newton of Washington walk was firm, his thinking clear and spontaneous. From appearances he has recovered fully from the seven shrapnel wounds he received six

> "General," I asked, "how long will the war last?"

We were walking in his garden and he stopped to reply:

"As long as England is able to fight and as long as America sends ammunition the war will continue. The unuccessful French and English offensive this month was a question of CREW PROBABLY LOST ammunition. This war has developed into an ammunition contest. It is the world's markets against the Central Powers."

"Can the western line be broken?" "You see in the papers every day," said the General, "that the allies are trying to break our lines, but they don't succeed. During their first October offensive they lost 180,000 men. We lost about a fifth as many. Do you think any army can afford such losses to win a mile of land?"

The General's five-year-old grandlaughter accompanied us on our walk. She clutched her grandfather's hand and frequently interrupted the conversation with remarks concerning the General's pet black dog, Teddy.

"That is our popular name for one of our ex-Presidents," I remarked as heard the chief say it.

"You mean Roosevelt," said the general. "I thought he was a great man. He was a good President, teamship Cretic from New York and | wasn't he? But to-day I can't under tion has arrived here safely. And still they come. I know personally a few of your army officers. They are fine men. This week I had a letter from one of them asking me for a photograph and a statement for some army publication. I sent both and hope they reach him."

Here we were interrupted by an orderly, who, saluting, said the little girl was wanted in the house.

"Goodby, my darling," said the General, adding to me: "She is the daughter of my son who was killed in France Jan. 28.

"Does the Serbian campaign bring

"Does the Serbian campaign bring the war any nearer to an end?" I asked presently.

"The war's duration depends on how long the English are able to fight and on American ammunition." repeated the General. "There is no doubt that American ammunition is self as an American. Later he admitted he was a German. He is he mitted he was a German. He is he prolonging it. And now the allies are raising an enormous loan in the United States. I see no end to the fighting yet."
"Shall you return to the front," I inquired.

"That depends on His Majesty,"

said the General.

But it is my impression that it depends on whether or not the General Staff decides on another drive to

"Why," I asked, "did the Germans fail to capture Paris?" "The French maintain," said von "The French maintain," said von Kluck, "that it was Joffre's strategy, When the war is over we can discuss that, but not during the war."
"One of Marshai von Hindenberg's officers told me," I remarked, "that it was because the Russian invasion of East Prussia called so many men from the west."

The General's reply I am not permitted to give, but I left with the idea that this, in his opinion, was the correct explanation.

Gen. von Kluck does not look his sixty-nine years and reminds one of Gen. Wood. He fought in 1866 against Austria and in the Franco-Prussian War was twice wounded.

WILLIAMS UNDER FIRE FOR HIS DELAY IN GAS DECISION

Public Service Commissioner Says He Has Finally Concluded Brooklyn Case.

GAS BILLS THE SAME.

Says They Do Not Vary No. Matter What the Legal Rate May Be.

Leaving the McCall stock holdings for the present, the Thompson Investigating Committee to-day began an aquiry into Commissioner Williams activities in the commission. Special years relief to gas consumers in the southern part of Brooklyn from excessive rates for gas. The Evening World has fought persistently to bring about an 80 cent gas rate for all of Greater New York, but the Kings County Lighting Company, serving certain sections of Brooklyn has enjoyed a special exemption that permited a charge of 95 cents per thousand cubic

For five years the demands of the consumers have been before the Public Service Commission, but always the day of decision has been postponed and the old excessive rate continued in force. The case has been pending before Commissioner George V. S. Williams. He was summoned as a witness to-day and the probe of investigation turned upon the record of proceedings.

Williams made this amazing statement as to gas rates:

"My experience with gas is that the bills are pretty much the same no matter what the rate is."

The witness said that he had at last come to a decision in this gas rate case and had written an opinion, but it was not yet ready to be made public because the other commissioners had not fully examined it. The case was on the commission calendar to-day for action, but went over because of objection by Commissioner Cram, who said he had not had a change to go over the case.

In-stead of perfunctory hearings with nobody but the defendant having anything to say, the session in the executive chamber will be more like hard-fought case in court.

The Thompson committee turned its attention at to-day's session to Public Service Commissioner George V. S. Williams and began its investigation of his conduct in office in relation to delays in the long-pending rate cases of gas and electric rates in Brooklyn. Williams was put on the stand and questioned about the demand of residents of South Brooklyn for reduction in price charged by the Kings County Lighting Co. for gas to 80 cents, the same as the rest of the city.
